THE LATE HARRISON STEPHENS.

Distribution of His Extensive Property by His Will.

MONTREAL, May 23.—Mr. Harrison Stephens' will leaves the bulk of his real estate between Mr. Romeo H. Stephens, the eldest, and Mr. Sheldon Stephens the youngest son. Of the real estate which falls to Mr. Romeo Stephens is the Ottawa Hotel property, a store on the corner of St. James-street and Victoria square occupied by Messrs. Henry Morgan & Co., and two stores on St. Paul, corner of St. Nicholas-street. To Sheldon Stephens most of Notre Dame-street property goes, the Brahadi's block, and the block on the corner of Notre Dame and St. Peter streets, also some store property on St. Paul streets, and two farms owned on the Lower Lachine road. The incomes average $20,000, or $25,000, the property in each case being entailed upon their heirs. To Ald. G. W. Stephens, the second son, will come recently acquired property on McGill street, at the old Crystal Palace, and Brodie farm, Lachine; the death of his mother giving him the Stephens' mansion, on Dorchester-street. Cash and other personal property to the extent of $400,000 also go to G. W. Stephens. Mrs. Stephens receives $6,000 per annum, with the use of the mansion on Dorchester-street so long as she lives. Each of the grand children receives a legacy of cash and valuable real estate, Mr. Harrison Stephens, son of Romeo, getting the farm at St. Lambert. There are $2,000 to the Montreal General Hospital and $2,000 to the Church of the Messiah.

THE MISSISSIPPI ROUTE.

New York Uneasiness at the Success of its New Rival.

BUFFALO, May 23.—An evening paper publishes the following New York despatch:—To-day's Herald says: "The statement that a single tow of barges en route from St. Louis to New Orleans carries ten thousand tons of grain will disgust trunk road managers, but it will affect in a greater degree the business men of New York. For while the railroad magnates can recoup themselves by speculation in their own securities, the man of business makes money only by legitimate barter and sale. When it is understood abroad that immense quantities of grain are removing to New Orleans there will be no lack of steamers and sailing vessels to carry cargoes to Europe, and as wheat can be placed on the levee at New Orleans at half the transportation charges that would await it if it came to New York by rail, the Crescent City can snap its fingers at New York's taunts until our canal facilities are so enlarged that inland transportation is equal to the greatest possible demand."

Wild Rice.

At a recent meeting of the Academy of Sciences, San Francisco, Capt. R. W. Simpson made an interesting statement detailing his efforts to acclimatize the Zizania aquatica, or wild rice, which grows so plentifully in some ponds, lakes, and rivers of Canada, extending north to Mackenzie River, nearly to within the Arctic circle. It grows annually from seed, and induces the presence of enormous flocks of wild fowl in the autumn, who visit these rich lakes and extensive beds for food. At Lake Erie it grows in water six to eight feet deep, and millions of red birds, as well as ducks and other water fowl, resort there, and afford very fine shooting. Sportsmen's clubs East are taking means to extend its growth, as it attracts game of all kinds. In Rice Lake, where it grows prolifically, it has been cut before seed time by manufacturers, who find its fiber, taken from under the surface of the water to a depth of six or seven feet, to be very valuable. It affords the strongest kind of fiber known for making bank note parchment paper. The Canadian Government are now trying to cultivate and stimulate its growth all over the inland waters of the Dominion. Two friends of Capt. Simpson have each sown thirty bushels of this rice seed, in Wales' Pond, Maine, and he desires to call attention to it, as an element likely to prove very useful in improving the shooting in our State, and as such capable of contributing largely to increase our food supply. Different varieties of it are known, but they all belong to one single species, varying according to climate and location. Capt. Simpson had tried to make it grow in Oregon and California, but had failed. He now learned that the seed needed first to be soaked in lukewarm water.

English Mail.

[Per steamer Geo. E. Starr.]

LONDON, May 24.—A despatch from Madras states that the Right Hon. Wm. Patrick Adam, Governor of the Presidency of Madras died at half-past eleven this morning, aged 58. The right hon. gentleman was known to every member of the House of Commons as the whipper-in of the Liberal members. He was not a member of the present House, having declined to stand for re-election. He was during the whole of his parliamentary career the confidential friend of the Liberal leader, and it was his duty to see that the entire strength of the party was brought out on nights when important divisions were to be taken. For this purpose he kept record not only of the regular residences, but also of all the haunts of every member of his party. It was not uncommon to see men whom he gathered from this and that place at very early hours in the morning, brought into the House to vote on the right side of a question whereof perhaps they knew nothing and cared less.

Price $55.

The new Raymond No. 1 Sewing Machine extension table, dropleaf two-drawers. These machines are fitted with all new improvements and have castors disconnecting balance wheel, &c. They have further the "Patent Automaton Bobbin Winder." This newest and most beautiful invention winds the bobbins as evenly as the cotton on the ordinary trade cotton reels, and without requiring any attention from the operator, thus doing away with all uneven bobbin winding which has hitherto been the greatest drawback to sewing machine comfort. You should see the "Automaton winder work." The patent right to the "Automaton Bobbin winder" is secured and confined to the "new Raymond," which in addition to its general excellence has this special advantage over all other sewing machines. A supply of the "New Raymond" received by last steamer; also a few of the "Raymond" former style on hand.—A. B. GRAY & Co., Victoria, sole agents for British Columbia.—27th April, 1881. *

AN UNRIVALED HAIR DRESSING,

Producing as Rich and Cleanly Appearance as Nature Alone had Imparted it.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE is the best and cheapest Hair Dressing—kills dandruff, allays irritation, and promotes a vigorous and healthy growth of the hair. No other compound produces these results. The superiority of BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS consists in their perfect purity and great strength. They are warranted free from the poisonous oils and acids which enter into the composition of many of the factitious fruit flavors now in the market. *

Nursery Medicines.

We do not believe in dosing children with drugs and medicines from the time they arrive in the world till they are grown, as some do. We have found a little castor oil and a bottle of Perry Davis' Pain-Killer safe and sure remedies for all their little ills, and would not do without them.

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE COLONIST.

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

THE FRENCH DERBY.

KEEN'S "FOXHALL" CARRIES OFF THE PRIZE.

GREAT REJOICING AMONG THE AMERICANS.

FRANCE.

PARIS, June 13.—James Keene's winning of the Grand Prize to day added to Pierre Lorillard's winning of the Derby ten days ago has contributed to make the Americans here to use a horsy phrase, "feel their oats" to a surprising degree, and they are in high state of enthusiasm at all resorts where it is their wont to congregate. Especially are they exuberant of good feeling at the Grand Hotel which is crowded with Yankees. The numerous cafes on Champs Elysees are taking advantage of the excitement. They are handsomely decorated with American colors and enthusiastic Frenchmen are declaring their satisfaction at the result and shrieking for Foxhall as freely as Americans themselves. Nor are they much to blame for the finish between Foxhall and Tristan was the grandest scene for years, as Fordham on the American and Archer on the English bred Tristan rode as if for their lives and the American just won by a head. The day as a whole was a very pleasant one, cloudy but not too warm. The audience at Longchamps was simply enormous. The railway companies, which give half the added money, were put to the severest test to transport the crowd while even the boats on the line were over loaded. The grand spectacle was the road, the show of equipages being decidedly superior to any exhibition seen since the last year of the Empire. As to the new toilets shown they were too supurb for profane hands to meddle with, though I may record the fact that many new colors and combinations of colors were shown to day for the first time. Among these were several that clearly showed the preference of the wearers as the result of the race. Each lady on one day wore white with blue spots in the sun umbrellas of the same. The custom inaugurated some years ago of giving race breakfasts was also largely followed and the different chateaus in and around the Bois de Bologne were all engaged by parties which as usual on such occasions paid big prices for poor fare and worse service. The scene at the course, however, will long be remembered by those present, certainly by those Americans who had not been present at a similar race before. The scene that followed the race was one of the wildest ever seen at Longchamps and in an instant dozens of American flags were produced, some of the four in-hands being literally covered with them. On the track the crowd was so dense that it was almost impossible for Fordham and Archer to get back to the scales, and it was only finally accomplished by the aid of a large police force. Fordham, who is well known to the Parisians, was stormed with congratulations for his masterly riding. Tristan, ridden by Archer, must have beaten Foxhall had he not been a wonderful colt. He made the running from the start. Immediately after the race the crowd gradually dissolved and the procession back to the city was much enjoyed by both lookers on and participants.

It is understood that Foxhall will be sent back to England early to morrow and go direct to Ascot, where, it is expected, he will meet Iriquois for the Sans Memorial over the new mile at even weights, 116 pounds each, while should Robert the Devil start in the same race he will have to carry 132 pounds. Tristan, who will also be sent to Ascot, will be in receipt of ten pounds each from Foxhall and Iriquois.

IRELAND.

DUBLIN, June 12.—Fifteen thousand people assembled to day in Mill street, but made no attempt to hold a meeting. A large force of military and police were drafted for service in town. The people formed a procession and marched through the streets with bands playing and banners flying. There was no speaking except by Foster, who advised the people to quit town quietly.

The Bishop of Ross, addressing his congregation, strongly depreciated the report of violence. The cause, he said, would be eventually gained by vigorous constitutional action.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, June 12.—Lord Houghton's eldest daughter, the Hon. Amelia Milnes, was married yesterday afternoon at St. Peter's, Eaton Square, to G. M. Fitzgerald, C. M. G. The bridegroom, who is a Catholic, is attached to the Egyptian administration and resides in Egypt. It was in Cario that Mr. Fitzgerald met Miss Milnes and they became engaged after a fortnight's acquaintance in the shades of the pyramids. As became a poet's daughter Lord Houghton gave the wedding breakfast at his house on Briton street and a large and fashionable company were in attendance. The wedding presents were some very handsome souvenirs from Lord Houghton's friends in America. The Prince and Princess of Wales got Lord Rosenberg's seat at the Durdans, Epsom, to-day until Monday and thence to Ascot for the cup day on the 16th.

H. M. S. Rocket, Capt. Orlebar, will sail for the northwest coast to-morrow. Dr. Powell, superintendent of Indian affairs, and Mr Anderson, commissioner of fisheries, will sail in the Rocket. Dr. Powell will visit all the coast tribes, and Mr. Anderson will inspect the fisheries. The party expect to be absent about two months.

POLICE COURT.—A large batch of d. & ds., consisting of four white men, was disposed of yesterday morning by fining them the usual $1.25 each. All pleaded guilty without any reservation with the exception of one, who only acknowledged to having taken a glass too much for the first time in many months. On being pressed to plead guilty or not guilty, he concluded that he was nearer being drunk than sober and accordingly chose the former alternative. Peter, a Naas Indian, was convicted of having an intoxicant in his possession and was fined $25, or in default one month's imprisonment with hard labor. The fines were all paid and the siwash and votaries of Bacchus liberated.

HAVERLY the Manager, C. B. Bishop the "Widow," James O. Barrows the "Elder," Widow Bedott The Play, June 24th and 25th, The Time.

FROM YALE.—The steamer Western Slope arrived last evening at 8:45 from Yale and way ports with a large passenger list and 55 head of beef cattle from the Vernon Bros.' cattle range, Okanagan, for Goodacre & Dooley of this city. Twenty head were landed at New Westminster on the way down. The river is reported very high, quite up to high water mark, and full of floating timber. At one place an entire island had floated off. A detention of two hours occurred just below Emory City in consequence of the rudder getting entangled with drift timber. The steamer did not leave the cattle pens till 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

NOTABLE ARRIVAL.—Mr. C. D. Davies, the world-renowned ventriloquist, arrived on the Dakota. He is accompanied by Mrs Davies and is just from Australia. The object of his trip to this quarter is to visit a sister of Mrs. Davies at Olympia; but it is hoped that he will consent to give one or two entertainments before returning to California.

IS THIS PERSECUTION?—Captain Moore and the purser of the Western Slope are summoned for putting the assistant engineer off the boat. The case will be tried on Friday at New Westminster. Mr. Bole is retained for defence.

MORE SUMMONSES.—Several other summonses were served on Capt. Moore when the Slope stopped at New Westminster yesterday, for an alleged infraction of the Dominion statute by carrying too much steam on the river.

The barque Lady Bowen, Capt. Paine, 37 days from Yokohama, arrived in Royal Sunday and will proceed to load lumber at Hastings mills for Sydney. She experienced fine weather throughout the voyage and made Cape Beale seven days ago.

Steamship Dakota, Capt. Morse, arrived at Welch, Rithet & Co.'s wharf in this harbor at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, having left San Francisco on the 10th inst. at 2.25 p. m. On the 11th she had fresh northerly winds with thick fog; on the 12th strong S. E. winds with rain; on the 13th had N. W. and westerly winds. The Dakota brings 970 tons merchandise (614 of which are for Victoria, 50 for Port Townsend, 175 for Seattle, 86 for Tacoma, and 45 for Olympia), a full passenger list and a heavy mail. Pursey Varney has our thanks for usual favors.

Steamship Barnard Castle was to have sailed yesterday from San Francisco for Victoria.

Great Musical Comedy Co. Coming.

A telegram was received yesterday from Mr. Garrett, manager of Garratt & Rice's Great Constellation, to the effect that the company are on the way to Victoria from Portland. They will arrive to-day. The specialty of the company is "Fun in Bristol." The "Bristol" is the finest steamboat in the world. It plies between New York and Boston. The scene is laid in the main saloon, where a party of tourists meet as passengers and pass an interesting evening together. The company comprise Mr. John Sheridan, Mr. F. Tannerhill, Mr. Dunbar, Miss Castleton, Miss Halleck, Miss Georgie Kane and several others, whose names have not reached Victoria. The public, however, may anticipate a most delightful engagement—the company giving their first performance to-morrow evening.

Haverly Widow Bedott Comedy Co.

Mr. Frank W. Paul, general agent for the Haverly Widow Bedott Comedy Co., arrived by the Dakota. The company which he represents will come by the next trip of the Idaho. This company is one of the most talented organizations extant. They represent the oddities and whims of Widow Bedott, the eccentric Yankee woman and her numerous "admirers" in a most laughable manner. The piece is most carefully put on the stage, Mr. C. B. Bishop representing the widow, and Mr. J. O. Barrows, the old-time Victoria favorite, Elder Sniffles. The press encomiums are of the most favorable character. We predict for the troupe a successful engagement.

ARRIVAL OF THE WOLCOTT.—The U. S. revenue cutter Oliver Wolcott, Captain Stodder, arrived yesterday afternoon from Port Townsend. She has been under repairs and has been painted up and beautified till her appearance is that of a new ship. Some repairs of her machinery are to be attended to at the Albion Foundry.

AMONG the passengers by the Dakota were Mr. R. Dunsmuir and family, and Mr. F. J. Barnard, M.P., and wife. The last named gentleman's health is greatly improved.

THE GREAT TRIAL.—The Reynolds vs. Batchelor suit ended yesterday with a verdict for the plaintiff. The court-room was filled with spectators and the verdict was awaited with breathless interest.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD.—A dispatch from London on May 30th says that Sir John Macdonald's health was improved by the voyage and that he has arrived in London to consult medical men as to his health.

A MUSICIAL AND LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT will be held on Thursday evening next (June 16th) in the schoolroom of the First Presbyterian church, Pandora street, commencing at 8 o'clock. *

A "Distracted" Reporter.

TO THE EDITOR.—As your contemporary has taken to pointing out typographical errors in your usually correct columns, permit me to point out one of his: In his leading article of to-day under the heading of "Distracted Ireland," he introduces a new breed of firearms, viz., "doubled muskets." I fear that the Irish are not the only "distracted" ones and that either the reporter or the types must see double. ERIN.

[Our correspondent should not be hypercritical. The "leading articles" of the organ are written with the point of a pair of scissors and the reporter surely cannot be held reaponsible for the errors of a writer three or four thousand miles distant.]

The True Singer Machine.

The undersigned respectfully informs the public of British Columbia that he has now on hand a large number of the True Singer Sewing Machines of different styles, which are of recent manufacture and have all the late improvements and attachments, making them capable of performing any description of work in the best and most rapid manner. It is proper that I again caution the public against being deceived by the representations in the advertisement of another agent, who pretends to offer Singer Machines at a ridiculously low price, which machines are represented to be equal to the True Singer Machines. These inferior machines are known to the trade as being poor indeed, and can be sold at $20 each, and even then have very few purchasers, as they are merely a cheap Canadian machine, endeavoring, to some extent, to imitate the True Singer Machine. Every machine I sell or send on trial is guaranteed both in price and quality, and the True Singer Machine at $50 is the lowest price at which it can be imported direct from the factory and sold in this market. Owing to the patents for all sewing machines having run out four or five years ago, companies have sprung up in every part of the Union for making an "Imitation Singer Machine." Why are not similar companies formed for making imitations of other Sewing Machines? The public will draw its own inference. Gold is continually counterfeited; brass and tin never. Hence the reason why the Singer has been imitated. I am prepared at any time to prove, by trials of the respective machines made in Montreal and those manufactured by the Original Singer Machine Company, that the Montreal Singer, which is advertised for $35, cannot and does not perform the work of the True Singer Machine sold by me.

FOURTH DAY.

MONDAY, June 13.

Reynolds vs. Job Batchelor, Eli Harrison, senior, and others.—This was an issue of fact as to the mental competence of the plaintiff at the date when certain transfers of property were made in the interest of defendant.

Mr. Pooley and Mr. Theo. Davie for plaintiff; Mr. Jackson and Mr. Hett for defendants.

Court assembled at 9:15 o'clock.

Henry D. Saunders sworn—Was in the employment of Reynolds from the year 1871 to the time when the building was given over to Batchelor; sometimes I was away a few months at a time; Reynolds lived rather a quiet life; only saw Reynolds on one spree; before Batchelor got married I observed a change in Reynolds, he seemed abstracted and absorbed, and short of memory; later on he became careless in habits, having been before exceptionably cleanly and possessing enough clothes for four men; in September he stopped coming to business; [witness described Reynolds' strange conduct about this time when he called on him in company with Mr. Davey of the naval yard to get him to sign the voucher for the quarterly account]; he couldn't be induced to sign the voucher at all, but defaced it with his pen; on another occasion, when visiting the house, witness saw Reynolds standing at the gate with only a shirt on; he told witness the Jews were inside waiting for him; persuaded him to go inside again, after promising to go and protect him; thought him crazy; he was very dirty; this was a few days after he had refused to sign the voucher; never saw him again until these proceedings commenced; heard him, on one occasion, request Batchelor to pay more attention to business.

Cross-examined by Mr Jackson.—Witness was clearly questioned as to how he came to give evidence in this case, but nothing satisfactory was elicited.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hett.—Have no idea when the present naval contract expired.

The Chief Justice.—The question at issue is whether Reynolds was in a sane state of mind at the time he made the agreement with Batchelor.

N. Mitchell, sworn—Was employed by Reynolds on 3rd June; my wife and I were to look after the garden and house; he continued to do his business and mine; Sunday after I came he engaged to drive Mr. Burns out when he sent word he was too ill to go; after that he only went occasionally to business; at first he used to play crib in the evenings, he was a good player; about that time a note came to the house for Reynolds which seemed to trouble him; it was from Batchelor; one morning Batchelor came and went to Reynolds' bedroom; they had some loud talk and after Batchelor left two unsigned promissory notes were left on the mantel-piece in his bedroom; at another time unsigned notes were left in the diningroom, which I destroyed; after Batchelor's visits Reynolds changed for the worse; he became very careless in his habits and weak in his mind; did not go to business at all; in Sept. Mr Cohen and Mr. Eli Harrison, jr., went to the bedroom; Harrison stayed a few minutes in the room, and left Cohen inside. Heard Batchelor afterwards say he would get the Jews to put him (Reynolds) out of the house if he didn't give him the business. The same evening Nesbitt, Stelly, Cohen, Eli Harrison, jr., and Batchelor came to the house; asked Nesbitt and Stelly not to bother him as he was very nervous; they wanted to take him into town, but I objected and they desisted; went into town to try and find Holmes or Wilson to come over and see what was going on, but I couldn't find them; the next day Reynolds went to town and came back in the evening with Askew; he said the women were going to drive him through the town stark naked; he passed bad nights, especially after Batchelor had been there; in September and October he talked all sorts of rubbish; was dirty, wouldn't dress and couldn't feed himself; of toast, which was cut in strips, he put one end of a strip in his mouth and pretended to light it with a fork as if it was a cigar; he used to bite his cup and saucer; one night he put the candlesticks, the spittoons, fireirons and chairs in bed with him; he said half-a-dozen men had been chasing him about the room to kill him; [Witness described the scene narrated by Mr. Douglas when he jumped into the latter's wagon]; he wouldn't go into the house, saying there were spring traps in the floor; that was the last time he showed any obstinacy; Dr. Davie recommended a change of scenery, and Askew offered to take him to Chemainus; before this Dr. Trimble had prescribed some medicine to compose his nerves and make him sleep and said it would do him no harm; in the latter part of October or beginning of November went to Chemainus with him; gave him walks and exercise, but he got no better; one night he got up and dressed himself, saying that some men were after him; the road from the steamer to Askew's is strewn with logs, and there was a little slough which we had to cross; he never fell into the water from the logs.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jackson—The symptoms I saw were not those of delirium tremens; he never took a drop of liquor from the time I went to him until I left him; he did not think he saw snakes or rats; but there were lots of rats, for which I got poison; in the middle of August he discontinued going into town; had no prescription from Dr. Davie till October; Reynolds was taking the sleeping draughts before I went there; Reynolds once said that Trimble was mad with him because he had discharged Job; that was the only time I saw Dr. Trimble there; in Sept. or October told Davie what I had given Reynolds and he told me to clear out all the bottles (there were enough to supply a drug store) and to give him no more of that medicine; did not tell Dr. Davie before September that I was giving sleeping draughts; I did not see any medicine brought there for him by Dr. Davie's orders; (bill of G. Morrison, druggist, produced) saw none of the bottles charged for in that bill mixed; [Bill of Langley & Co. produced.] Don't know the dates on which I got medicines from Langley.

Mr. Jackson—This accounts for the illness; I've no more to say to you.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hett—He used to smoke from a $1 to $1.50 worth of cigars a day; Dr. Davie told me not to give him more than three cigars a day; but he would not be confined to that number; kept no diary, and can't say when I first went to Langley's for medicines; Dr. Trimble never told me to get any of the mixtures.

Wm. Batchelor, sworn—I was in England when this transaction took place; my mother had been asked to come out several times and my brother Job wrote for her to come out and live with him; on the 2nd August, 1879, left England and arrived here on the 3rd September; rode out to North Dairy with Job on the second or third Sunday after arriving here to see my uncle (Reynolds); went to North Dairy for a week after a quarrel Reynolds had had with a man; cooked myself; the food was good but roughly served; the bedroom was good and clean, but Reynolds wouldn't undress himself nor keep himself clean; on the 15th of last September brought him to my house on Pandora avenue; he had a suit of grey cloth clothes, but he wouldn't put them on; I was allowed $13 a month for keeping him; the allowance ran in arrears; remember a conversation with Miles Thomas on a Sunday morning; I complained to him that I was short of money, that I had gone to a good deal of expense and that I was satisfied with $13 a month as the business was not paying, but I could not get it; Thomas said Job ought to pay that $13; your brother (meaning Job) has something like $100 a month to pay Reynolds; he advised me to go to Drake & Jackson's and get a copy of the agreement; he said that he could burst up the concern; this remark led me to suppose that he had money in it; I stated at the house to my family, in the presence of Reynolds, what Thomas had said; am still in Job Batchelor's employ; work for what I get; after he left the North Dairy farm Reynolds refused to drink beer or anything; have seen him drink at North Dairy; at my house he had the same bed that he had at North Dairy; remember going to Crossen's to get a black hat for Reynolds; I wanted to get him to go out; a few days afterwards a bill for the hat as charged against Reynolds came in to the store; Job said there were plenty of hats over James Bay belonging to Reynolds; heard my uncle complaining that he could not get clothes; he asked for a pair of pants on Christmas and got them on Good Friday.

Cross-examined by Mr. Jackson—When my brother made arrangements for Reynolds to board with me it was stipulated he should live the same as the rest of the family. [A note written from North Dairy by Mr. Reynolds and addressed to "Dear Job," asking for a sleeping draught was put in.] Believe Job's business has not paid.

To Mr. Hett—My household has always been supplied with meat free from the shop; my wages are $65 a month; I drive the cart, deliver the meat and help in the shop.

Alex. Holmes sworn—Was in the employ of Mr. Reynolds as shopman from 1868 till January 1st, 1879; remember Job Batchelor coming out; in June or July, 1878, negotiations were opened for witness and Batchelor to take the business; asked Reynolds what he wanted for the business; said he didn't know; I told him if he would put in $5,000 for Job I would put in $5,000 for myself, and we would carry on the business; the interview came to nothing; after this Reynolds began to get weak in the head; he was backwards and forwards at the shop; the business was solvent, but required a few thousand dollars to carry it on; had no hesitation in advancing the amount required, and the business got on very well; Reynolds seemed very nervous and weak; remembered when he discharged Job Batchelor; he complained of his extravagance and his way of keeping the books; on the 7th September Mr. Rithet, J.P., had a power of attorney given him to carry on the business; Reynolds gradually grew worse, and I could get little that was intelligent out of him; he said he was compelled to give Job Batchelor his promissory notes for fear Job would expose his true name; remember Stelly and Nesbitt offering to buy the business on behalf of Batchelor; told them I would agree to sell the business for $10,000, cash or good paper; the same day they said they would take it; the next morning Reynolds came over in a very weak and agitated state and said that Nesbitt, Stelly and others had been over to his house and he had agreed to dispose of the business; told him he was foolish to do so without security; I saw Rocke Robertson the same day; attended a meeting at Bornstien's store that afternoon; neither J. Batchelor nor Eli Harrison came there; notified Cohn that I held Reynolds' power of attorney and that they could only treat for the transfer of the property, etc., through Rocke Robertson; that afternoon Mr. Robertson saw Reynolds in a little house back of the butcher shop; I wanted some one else on the power of attorney, and Mr. Rithet was added on; saw Reynolds afterwards; he was entirely out of his mind; said he had been shot, thought he had a hole in his head, that he would be hanged, etc.; never saw him from that day till I saw him outside this Court; after he was at Chemainus J. Batchelor showed me a revocation of the power of attorney; sent Bowden and Wilson to Chemainus to see him, Mitchell having reported that he was being badly treated there; they did not succeed in doing any good; the revocation of the power of attorney called for the surrender of Reynolds' will which I held; he had brought it to me at Leadenhall market; it was in an ordinary adhesive envelope, but was not sealed; I scratched it all over with ink, and said that if it was opened it would be known; I delivered the will when I gave up the key; when he brought the will he said he was afraid to leave it in his house.

Cross examined by Mr. Jackson—When he gave the power of attorney to Rithet and I, I thought he was capable of transacting his business; the power is dated 6th September, 1878; Mr. Dudgeon, Reynolds' shopman, had him locked up in the house; we were afraid of his being tampered with; Nesbitt and Stelly said they represented Batchelor.

To Mr. Davie—On the 1st January, 1879, left the business in a good condition; remember writing Askew demanding payment of the account he owed Reynolds.

To Mr. Hett—Cannot exactly say the amount of the notes Rithet and I gave while we had charge of the business; it was not $10,000.

To Mr. Davie—The liabilities we incurred were for cattle and stock we had on hand.

Geo. Rudlin sworn—In 1878 commanded the steamer Maude; remember Reynolds coming down some time in the month of November in charge of Askew; he was not capable of taking care of himself; Askew said that he might take a notion and jump overboard; he also said it was necessary he should come down to sign papers from Holmes and Batchelor; Reynolds told me he was afraid to come to Victoria; he was afraid the people would tear him to pieces on the wharf; that he had been after many women in Victoria and he was afraid their husbands would tear him to pieces; I told him to go into his room and I would protect him; he did so, and when we reached Victoria he was driven away in a carriage, I think, with Batchelor.

S. E. B. King, sworn—

The Chief Justice said that at the public schools a class should be formed to instruct pupils how to open their mouths and speak out like men, not to look down on the ground and mumble out words that were unintelligible.

S. E. B. King, sworn—In the summer of 1878 delivered bread for Mrs. Hodges; called nearly every day at Reynolds' house; one day Mrs. Mitchell asked me to go back of the house and help her husband as he could not control Reynolds, whom I found standing on the top of the gate and Mitchell holding his clothes; he wouldn't go into the house, saying there were springs in the floor and people wanted to murder him; I left promising to bring marines and soldiers from Esquimalt to protect him; he said he had the diarrhœa and a hole in the side of his throat; when I next saw him he had been to Chemainus and was in charge of O'Connor; he was lowspirited but not violent; O'Connor said he was dirty and would not get into the bath until he was threatened with the hose.

Counsel for plaintiff here put in and read copies of deeds and transfers of Reynolds' property to Job Batchelor; also, mortgage from Batchelor to Steitz for $1529.60, and assignment of mortgage from Steitz to D. McPhaden for $5,034.50.

Wm. Reid, sworn—Saw Reynolds in the commencement of 1879 when he had run away from St. Joseph's Hospital; he had a blanket around his shoulders and was trying to run; could not understand what he said; soon afterwards one of the men from the hospital overtook him and took him back; think he had some clothes on besides the blanket; the blanket was over his head.

Louis Marks, sworn—Remember the close of the year 1878; was working for Reynolds; remember him going to Chemainus; saw him after he returned to the house, James Bay; he had light pants on and a black coat, had no hat on; he muttered to himself and he walked into the garden.

The Chief Justice—If muttering is a sign of lunacy every witness I have heard here for the past ten years has been crazy.

David Green, sworn—In the years '75, '76, '77 and part of '78, Job Batchelor was a customer of mine; he bought very good clothing and paid for them; he spent between $250 and $300 up to the time he was married; had a conversation in my store with Batchelor in the summer of 1878 and he told me Reynolds' mind was deranged and he was not fit to be seen.

To His Lordship—Batchelor's transactions were principally cash; just before he got married he paid me $75 for clothing; the goods were not entered as sold to him, but the items were carried into the cash account; about two months ago Mr. Metcalf bought a whole suit for Reynolds, paying $50 for it, saying he was going to make him a present of it; Reynolds wears the suit now.

Sullivan, sworn—Nursed Reynolds at St. Joseph's Hospital; he was out of his senses; was afraid of being killed; tore a hole in a blanket, stuck his head through it, and wore it all the time; he was not cleanly; gave him a cold shower bath by the doctor's orders; he yelled and got away; I never tried it again; he was not allowed a knife and fork; the Sisters considered him crazy and would not even allow a glass in the room; he was always raving about people coming to murder him.

The affidavit of Robert H. Wilson (deceased) was put in.

Sergt. Bloomfield, sworn—Saw Reynolds at North Dairy shortly after he went there; he was lying in a small front room in a most deplorable condition and I reported his state to the then Supt. of Police; I went there on other business; he had an old straw mattress, very few blankets and was in a very neglected condition.

The affidavit of E. Metcalf stated that the meat sent to North Dairy Farm for Reynolds consisted of scraps—good enough for dogs; Reynolds looked as dirty as any Siwash; his pants were old and too small for him; his bed was a hearth rug, his pillow an old coat; his shoes were boots cut down and full of holes; witness gave him some tobacco; he complained that Batchelor would not give him what he wanted, and that he (Reynolds) couldn't go to town because he was ashamed of his appearance; witness had seen Batchelor wearing a large gold ring that had belonged to Reynolds.

Counsel for the plaintiff here announced the close of their case.

Mr. Jackson said that Mr. Harrison would rebut Mr. McLean's evidence as to Dr. Trimble being present in the room when the affidavit was signed by Reynolds. Dr. Trimble was anxious the imputation cast by Mr. McLean should not rest upon his character.

The Foreman—The jury do not think Dr. Trimble's character is affected.

The Chief Justice—Not in the least. It is a question of memory entirely.

N. Mitchell, recalled by the Chief Justice—When Reynolds took the medicine himself a bottle only lasted a day or a day and a half; when I found out that a bottle ought to last 5 or 6 days I gave it him myself; at Chemainus I took him for walks about a mile long; we went through the woods to the road and strolled about; we had to jump over logs to get there.

Mr. Hett said Mr. Bunster, M.P., who was present, desired to refute a statement of plaintiff that he (Bunster) wanted to settle a horse swindling case for $100.

The Chief Justice—Mr. Bunster has a much more effective method than a Court of Justice of refuting any injurious statement by publishing "a card" (laughter). There was not the slightest imputation on Mr. Bunster's character.

Mr. Hett said no doubt his friend on his left (the editor of The Colonist) would be quite prepared to do Mr. Bunster justice. (Laughter.)

Court then took a recess.

AFTERNOON SITTING

Case resumed at 2:45 p.m.

Mr. Pooley for the plaintiff remarked that the case before the jury appeared a very simple one when they first entered the box, but as the trial progressed so much extraneous matter got introduced that it became lenghy and somewhat intricate. The learned counsel then read the plaint upon which the case rested, and upon that plaint evidence had been adduced so as to enable them to arrive at a competent issue. That issue is, was the plaintiff Reynolds sane or not when he made a transfer of his property to the defendant Batchelor? Was he then competent to transact his own business? He would before he closed enter into the motives which apparently induced the defendant to act as he had done. The antecedents of Reynolds in New York and San Francisco, his desertion from the American Army and arrival here in 1862 were then commented on. The learned counsel then dwelt upon the fact of Botterell being taken into partnership and retiring with $10,000 or $11,000 as his share of the business and afterwards entering the plaintiff's employ again as buyer. That witness characterized the business as an excellent one as late as '79. In June or July, '78, Reynolds became unwell and somewhat affected in his mind. This was the commencement of his trouble, and it increased until he was ordered away to Chemainus. He had dismissed his nephew on 17th July previous as that nephew, the defendant in the case, had forfeited his confidence. He had been in plaintiff's employ for three years and had only credited himself with $625 wages on the books, which was entirely inadequate to cover his expensive habits. The plaintiff was fully of the opinion that his nephew had made an improper use of his position, in fact that he had robbed him. This seems to have had a bad effect on Reynolds; but the influence of Batchelor was sufficient shortly afterwards to obtain from his uncle two promissory notes amounting to $1800. These notes were obtained by a threat of exposure on the part of Batchelor of his uncle's antecedents which he much dreaded. The meeting of Cohn, Stelly, Batchelor and others at the house on James Bay was then described when an agreement was drawn up but never carried out, as the $100 per month had not been paid. At that time the plaintiff was very unwell and was getting worse and worse. Shortly after this Holmes got a power of attorney but would not assume the responsibilities of taking the business in hand without assistance and accordingly Mr. Rithet was named with him. These parties conducted it till 1879. Dr. Davie then thought that Reynolds should be sent away as he was afraid of his nephew, and afraid of being murdered. He was accordingly sent to Askew's at Chemainus with his keeper Mitchell. Mitchell was soon kicked out of the house and sent away. Then commenced the troubles. Askew from being a fast friend of Reynolds went over to Batchelor and the letter sent by Askew to the latter was the key to the difficulty. "Come up as soon as you can," the letter read, and "matters can be arranged. Let me know when you are coming." Dr. Trimble writes and advises that Reynolds should return home. Askew draws up a revocation of Holmes' power of attorney and a bill in chancery is filed by Holmes against Batchelor. Askew's motive for going over to Batchelor was then commented on which the learned counsel considered a very strong one as Reynolds had previously written up to him for a settlement of accounts between them. Askew came down with Reynolds and they were met by Eli Harrison, sen., and the plaintiff was at once taken over to Batchelor's residence across the Bay with the object of getting him once more under the defendant's influence. Discrepancies in the evidence of Dr. Trimble and Mr. McLean were then rapidly dwelt upon, especially the remarkable fact that Dr. Trimble did not recollect being present when an important affidavit was drawn up and signed when McLean swore positively that he was and that he urged Reynolds to sign the document. This was the affidavit by means of which Batchelor was enabled to get hold of the property. All this time Reynolds was getting worse and worse. His hallucinations on the steamer and the caution given that he should not be allowed to go below for fear of destroying himself were referred to. Three days after this he signed the abovementioned document. Hallucinations in St. Joseph's Hospital, his trying to escape, tearing up blankets, upsetting the stove, &c., &c., were sketched. Then his removal back to James Bay, where his unruly conduct brought about a serious domestic affliction in the defendant's family. His career at North Dairy farm was next commented on and the evidence of Sergeant Bloomfield, Metcalf and others referred to. After this his removal to Wm. Batchelor's was spoken of and the noticeable fact that there with a good bed, a better furnished room and kind attendance he got rapidly better, till on getting under the sympathetic and attentive care of Mrs. Byrant, of South Saanich, a complete cure was effected. The attention of the jury was again called to discrepancies in the evidence and he reviewed the testimony of Dr. Matthews and Messrs. Jones, W. B. Nicholls, Mitchell, E. Harrison, jr., and others. The latter witness, the learned counsel remarked, appears to have put the matter so strongly before Mr. Rithet as to induce that gentleman to file an affidavit in Batchelor's favor. Mr. E. Harrison, sen., did not appear to have taken an active part in the proceedings till after Batchelor's engagement to his daughter; then he became a prominent figure in them. The way Reynolds was made to act induced Holmes to say "take care he, Reynolds, is a dangerous man, and will sell you as he has sold me." Under the circumstances no one would wonder at such an exclamation. In referring to Mr. Drake's evidence the learned counsel remarked that he, although a clever lawyer, was only human and liable to fall into error. He would not presume to say that Mr. Drake was to blame in any way; but his evidence showed that Reynolds and Batchelor were acting together and it was to say the least of it a singular thing that Mr. Drake should be the adviser of both parties. The circumstance of Reynolds taking such an extraordinary quantity of Dr. Trimble's medicine while under Dr. Davie's care was next referred to. Mr. McPhaden's position in the case was then touched upon and the remark was made that there was nothing whatever against him in these proceedings, and if he suffered in consequence he would suffer as an innocent man. The will drawn up by Mr. T. Davie was mentioned wherein Reynolds left £1000 each to three of his sisters and £1000 to a man residing in Manchester. Batchelor's anxiety to get hold of this will was accounted for by the fact that he thought Holmes was getting the bulk of the property.

Mr. E. Harrison, sr., here attempted to make a statement from the body of the Court-room, but was immediately stopped.

The condition of the business when Batchelor got possession of it was entered into at some length to show that there was a great deal more property than the defence admitted and all that Reynolds had received out of it was $6 only. Evidence of Thomas, the two Kings, Green, Saunders, Holmes and others was reviewed. Authorities were then quoted as evidence of incipient insanity; and the remark was made that as the learned Chief Justice would state the law to the jury he would not occupy their time on those points. After going fully into the value of the property, the good will of the business, &c., and the estimate put upon it by the defence the learned counsel concluded an admirable address by stating that the whole case was such a conspiracy to get hold of property as had never come to light in this Province and such a one as he hoped would never happen again. He would now leave the matter in the hands of the jury to deal with on its merits and in accordance with the evidence which had been brought forward.

Mr. Jackson, for the defence, entered fully into the state of the business when taken over by his client to show that it was not in such a prosperous condition as had been represented. His learned friend had attempted to make a great deal out of the payment of only $6 to Reynolds; but Batchelor whether he had a right or not had paid out at sundry times more than $2000. Other expenses had been settled whether rightly or wrongly. Besides the man had had a living all along. Reference was made to the issue before the jury as to whether the plaintiff was in a state of mind competent to transfer property and he quoted authorities to prove that deeds executed by lunatics in their lucid intervals are valid. It could not be said that the plaintiff in this case was a lunatic. He might have had some symptoms, but he was not at any time incapable of transacting business and fully understood what he was doing. A case, Swinton vs. Swinton was cited to show that a will held good that was signed three days after a fit of insanity on the part of the testator and in five days afterwards the party was crazy again. Another case referred to was one in which an uncle of Banks the painter, well known to several of the jury, was one of the parties concerned. He was a lunatic a few days before the date of the will and became insane again almost directly after it was executed. The judge in that case decided that excentricities, slowness of intellect, hallucinations, &c., did not constitute insanity. It would be for the jury to say whether Reynolds was capable of understanding the business presented to him or not. The learned counsel would not take up their time by going much into the evidence, but would refer to that of Mr. Douglas as showing that Reynolds was not right in his mind when he took him home. But that might have been delirium tremens. Botterell said that he talked rationally in Rickman's store in August, and also in September, when he executed the power of attorney in favor of Holmes and Rithet. Other evidence was briefly commented on. On the 17th October plaintiff was quite rational when Mr. Harrison served him with a writ. Other witnesses proved that he was always in his right mind when they visited him. Dr. Matthews said that he talked rationally. Several others said he was perfectly sane on Christmas Day. In January, 1879, terms of sale were discussed and final arrangements were made for the transfer of the property, and then he was quite rational. Nothing whatever had been brought forward by the other side to contradict that evidence. The plaintiff remembers every article of wearing apparel, jewelry, etc., when he went to St. Joseph's Hospital, but did not remember or had totally forgotten all that had been done pertaining to business. The plaintiff's desertion from the American army and his disregard for his oath on that occasion were next commented on. After which the learned counsel remarked that in July a perfect understanding existed between plaintiff and defendant; but the former had forgotten all about the letters that had passed between them. He was then attending to business at the butcher's shop, cheques were drawn and signed and bills were retired amounting to $2150 on the 13th August, which proved that he was then attending to business in an ordinary way. Could it be believed that that business and everything that followed had been totally forgotten? The hallucination that he had been drugged by Dr. Davie was very natural under the circumstances, when Mitchell was giving him the medicine prescribed by another medical man in such extraordinary quantities that a bottle which should have lasted more than a week was replenished every two days. Referring to the valuations of the property when the transfer was made the learned counsel contended that it had depreciated a great deal from that time to March. After referring to the sums of money paid and the amount of liabilities assumed the learned counsel concluded with leaving the case entirely in the hands of the jury, being, however, fully of the opinion that their verdict would be in favor of his client.

Mr. Hett for the defendant McPhaden had a few remarks to make in his behalf. His client had had nothing whatever to do with the present unhappy differences. He reminded the jury that if their verdict should be given for the plaintiff a big chancery suit will follow which would entirely ruin the business and sacrifice all the property.

The Chief Justice—That is not a question for the jury to consider at all.

Mr. Hett—If a chancery suit results from the decision of the jury it will be twelve months before it can be settled and will be of no advantage to anyone but the lawyers.

The Chief Justice—That should not influence the decision in the least.

Mr. Hett would not have said anything about this phase of the matter only that the interests of his client were so deeply involved. Mr. McPhaden would in case of a verdict against him suffer very much, as the business had already fallen off a great deal in consequence of these proceedings during the last few days. Authorities were cited to show that hallucinations often existed in the minds of persons not insane and many instances were adduced.

The Chief Justice remarked that these instances were amusing, but they had nothing to do with the question before the jury.

Mr. Hett contended that there was no evidence to show that Reynolds was insane. On the contrary, the evidence as to his sanity was as clear and as distinct as anything could be. The learned counsel then briefly reviewed the evidence of several of the witnesses, and afterwards remarked that it was strange that these proceedings were not commenced till just before the late assizes, and he believed that they never would have been instituted at all only that Mr. Nesbitt, a very important witness, is dead. Had he been living the case would never have been brought into court. Several other authorities were cited in support of the contention that although a man might generally be insane yet in his lucid intervals he might be able to transact business, and deeds executed at such times would hold good in law. The plaintiff Reynolds had been addicted to drink and had suffered from the effects of delirium tremens, yet those fits of temporary insanity from October to January did not incapaciate him from attending to business. After making a few more remarks the learned counsel concluded by leaving the case in the hands of the jury for decision.

THE JUDGE'S CHARGE.

His Lordship said that the issue for the jury to enquire into was, whether when the plaintiff conveyed his property to J. Batchelor he was mentally competent to do so. A great many outside issues had been raised and sordid motives had been attributed to many gentlemen which were certainly beyond the issue. All the imputations against the professional men were, he must say, unfounded. There was nothing to show that any of the agents in this business had acted from sordid or selfish motives. It was clear from the fact of the presence of men like Stelly and others at the interview when the final arrangements were made that they had no selfish object; it is clear that they thought he was not sane because they consulted Dr. Trimble. If they considered him sane why did they consult him, and why did he play him a game of cribbage to test his insanity? No one can believe that if he was indeed sane at that time seven of his friends would have been called in to test his sanity or protect his interests. The mere opinion of an unprofessional mind as to the sanity or insanity of a man went for nothing; but the professional evidence of Dr. Trimble was important and conclusive. He mentioned several points which clearly showed that the man was insane, and yet the doctor said he was not insane because he knew him and because he played a game of cribbage. It could not be denied that on the day upon which he returned from Chemainus he was insane. His conduct on the boat shows that conclusively, while other people at other times on the same day said he appeared perfectly sane. Mr. Drake's evidence was very direct and satisfactory, and Askew's letter threw a flood of light on the matter. Mr. Robertson had refused to act; and the judge acquitted Askew, Nesbitt and Stelly of sordid motives, but their conduct showed that they thought him insane. Mr. Drake could not be blamed for taking instructions from these respectable men. He saw Reynolds two or three times, and he did nothing foolish; besides Mr. Drake was assured by Dr. Trimble that he was sane. A man must be assumed to be sane until he is proved to be insane, and either state of mind must be deemed continuous until it is proved otherwise. The sort of incompetency with which this man was afflicted is generally gradual, like softening of the brain. Some kinds of insanity come suddenly like a sun stroke. Delusions of the most extraordinary description seized upon the man, and if he uttered the foolish things ascribed to him they are evidence of insanity. The letter of the 17th July, 1878, shows fickleness of mind; plaintiff seems to have made up his mind to discharge Batchelor before the marriage. He ought to have told him of his intention before marriage; and his failure to do so shows not insanity but indecision. While attended by Dr. Davie the plaintiff deceived him by means of a very old prescription of Dr. Trimble, which he misused to get as large quantities of sleeping draughts as he wished. Dr. Trimble and Dr. Davie agreed that narcotics would drive him mad and unknown to either physician he got all the narcotics he wanted. Mitchell only followed medical instructions in giving him walks and baths, and did not illuse him. His Lordship said the jurors had been as much worried as any one else by the discursive character of the evidence. They had only to decide as to the state of the plaintiff's mind on the day the deeds were signed. If they wished any further directions he would be glad to give it. The condition of Reynolds at North Dairy farm had been stated to have been wretched by one witness, and by another witness it was said that all things conducive to his comfort were there and that he would not use them. This, he was bound to tell the jurors, was another evidence of insanity.

In answer to the foreman, the Chief Justice said the jury were to find that the plaintiff was sane or insane when the deeds were signed. He might have had lucid intervals and in one of those intervals might have signed the deeds.

The jury then retired.

At a quarter to six o'clock the jury came out with a verdict that at sundry times the plaintiff was generally incapable of transacting business.

The Chief Justice said that verdict could not be received.

The foreman said it was a compromise verdict—one of the jurors having wished the insertion of the qualifying words.

The Chief Justice adjourned the Court till 8 o'clock, and the jury retired to their room.

At 8:10 o'clock, p. m., the jury again entered the court and the foreman presented the following as their verdict:

The jury find that from some day prior to the 5th of Sept., 1878, till some day and subsequent to the 23d of April, 1879, the plaintiff, F. Reynolds, was generally of unsound mind; and it has not been proved that he was in a fit state to manage his own affairs on the several days during the above period on which important business was transacted with the defendant Job Batchelor.

The Chief Justice—Is this a majority verdict?

The Foreman—No, my lord, it is the unanimous verdict.

The Chief Justice—Very well, gentlemen, I shall record it as a verdict for plaintiff.

Mr. Hett—I would ask your lordship to reserve the question of costs as far as Mr. McPhaden is concerned.

The Chief Justice—Everything is reserved. Nothing is settled except the question of sanity.

Mr. Pooley asked for an order to have Reynold's jewelry delivered up to him.

The Chief Justice said he would make no order at present.

Mr. Davie asked that Mr. McPhaden should not be continued as receiver, or at all events, that Reynolds should have equal power in the business.

The Chief Justice said that no question of right had been decided and in the interest of Mr. Reynolds he wished to inconvenience the business as little as possible. In any case, all the parties would lose heavily.

Mr. Davie contended that Reynolds should be admitted to the same control as Mr. McPhaden. The doors were now closed against him, and McPhaden is actually a partner in Reynolds' property.

The Chief Justice decided that he would make no order at present. There was no suspicion against McPhaden and he would continue him as receiver until Monday next or until another order had been made.

The Court then adjourned and this most extraordinary case came to an end.
